

INFINITY ARCH IN CHROME STUDIO STANLEY

The chrome editions of the Infinity Arch series are a nod to Italian Radical Design of the 1970s—particularly Superstudio and Archizoom Associati's mirrored, architectural objects using clean, luxurious materials like chrome and acrylic.

The double stacked 20 cm cubea behave like a small, self-contained room: chrome as a mirror-plane, smoky acrylic as a tinted façade, and the helium tube reading like a drawn line suspended in space.

Encased in a smoky Italian acrylic vitrine, the bright white-pink output is softened and refracted through the volume, shifting with the viewer's position.
